THIRD ARTICLE. Written expressly for the Progress.

Another element of genuine nobility is independence. This will scarcely be disputed. A man may stand high in morality and intelligence, but if he allows another to control the operations of that intelligence, he excludes himself from our category of noblemen. Such servility is the foulest form of slavery. You may manacle a man and call him your slave-you may, of prohibition rests with the Docommand; but read the workings of that man's soul and you will se wr.ngs; and his ultimate defiance is he who deposits his mind at another's feet as trustee to his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his own deposits and the cost of his own deposits of the cost of his own deposits his mind at another the cost of his own deposits his mind at another the cost of his cost of his own deposits his mind at another's feet as trustee to his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his own deposits his mind at another's feet as trustee to his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his own deposits his mind at another's feet as trustee to his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his cost of his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his cost of his will, and who considers the approbation of others cheaply purchased at the cost of his A lady schoolmistress of Valuation of public questions. Personalities will not be permitted. We do not hold our extremely purchased at the extremely purchased at the extremely purchased at the cost of his own degradation. The problem of the problem of the purchased at the cost of his own degradation. The man of intelligence who soars above man of intelligence who soars above the delusions which have thriven chained with the well-fed g ing of sycophantic smile-hunters, will walk alone-has no small share of nobility in his constitution, and, in proportion to the attainment: he refuses to prostitute, is entitled to honor and respect. But in this believe and freedom.

Intelligence may be prostituted to ignoble purposes; whilst an ungenterous independence deserves not better name than degmatism. To render a man ennobled by the possible portion of the subject. But when people unteresting the number of Mounted Police are to rescue others from its suares.

itself is only valuable to the commanity when exercised for the good of the community. The man who reaps alone the profits of his mental toil has little claim to the honor which he deserves, who, seeking to render his intelligence conducive to the interests of the commonweal, has fair precedence above the most resplendent genius that ever dazzled the world without blessing it. Never is talent better exercised than when devoted to the elevation of the downcast, the forlorn and the destitute. which allows the Secretary to retain from the prizes a membership for the following year.

We also beg to report that there were 701 entries for the exhibition, which is the largest number that ever been recorded on the society's books since its incorpora-tion, and the exhibition, which was to have been held on the 3rd of October, but owing to a severe held on the 10th, which was in every way a grand success.

All of which is very respectfully
